The World of Dragonlance

The Dragonlance series is set in the fantasy world of Krynn, a place filled with diverse landscapes, cultures, and magical elements. The world is characterized by its rich history, where gods, dragons, and mortals interact in a grand tapestry of stories. The continent of Ansalon serves as the primary setting for "Dragons of Autumn Twilight," showcasing a variety of regions such as the majestic mountains, lush forests, and treacherous swamps.

Krynn is not just a backdrop; it is a living entity that influences the characters and events throughout the series. The presence of the three moons—Solinari, Lunitari, and Nuitari—adds a unique layer of complexity to magic and its practitioners, affecting everything from spellcasting to the moral choices of characters. The world-building in Dragonlance is meticulously crafted, providing readers with a sense of immersion and depth.

The Pantheon of Gods

The gods of Krynn play a crucial role in shaping the events of the Dragonlance saga. Each deity represents different aspects of morality, magic, and nature, creating a dynamic interplay between divine influence and mortal action. The key pantheon includes:

- Paladine - The god of good, representing honor and justice.
- Takhisis - The queen of darkness and the primary antagonist.
- Gilean - The god of knowledge and balance.
- Reorx - The god of creation, representing craftsmanship and invention.

This pantheon not only drives the plot but also serves as a moral compass for the characters, guiding their decisions and actions throughout the story.
