Employment and career readiness encompass a range of skills and competencies that prepare individuals to enter the workforce successfully. This concept includes both hard skills, such as technical knowledge related to a specific job, and soft skills, such as communication, teamwork, and problem-solving abilities. Understanding these skills is crucial for job seekers, as employers increasingly value candidates who not only possess the necessary qualifications but also demonstrate the ability to adapt and thrive in a professional environment.

Career readiness can be segmented into various components:
