Overview of "Running with Scissors"

"Running with Scissors," released in 2006, is a film adaptation of Augusten Burroughs' memoir of the same name. Directed by Ryan Murphy, the film explores Burroughs' unconventional upbringing and his experiences with a dysfunctional family. The narrative follows Augusten, played by Joseph Cross, as he navigates life under the care of his mother's psychiatrist, Dr. Finch, portrayed by Brian Cox. Evan Rachel Wood plays the character of Natalie, Augusten's close friend, who becomes a significant presence in his life. The film received mixed reviews but was praised for its unique storytelling and strong performances.

The Plot and Characters

The plot of "Running with Scissors" is both poignant and darkly comedic. It depicts Augusten's chaotic childhood and adolescence while living with Dr. Finch's eccentric family. Each character represents different aspects of mental health struggles, including addiction, instability, and the search for identity. Evan Rachel Wood's character, Natalie, embodies a spirit of rebellion and complexity, providing a counterbalance to Augusten's more introspective nature.

The film not only highlights individual struggles but also comments on the broader topic of mental health in America. By showcasing the harsh realities of Burroughs' life and the peculiarities of his guardians, it offers a raw perspective on the effects of mental illness on families and relationships.

Evan Rachel Wood: A Brief Biography

Evan Rachel Wood was born on September 7, 1987, in Raleigh, North Carolina. She began her acting career at a young age, appearing in television series and films that showcased her talent.
