Overview of "Everyday Use"

"Everyday Use" tells the story of a mother and her two daughters, Dee and Maggie, who have contrasting views on heritage and identity. The narrative unfolds in rural Georgia, where the mother reflects on her life and the complex relationships she has with her daughters. The story is narrated from the perspective of the mother, who is proud of her roots and understands the value of everyday items, unlike her daughter Dee, who seeks heritage as a means of social status.

Characters

Understanding the characters is crucial for analyzing the dynamics of the story. Here are the primary characters:

- Mama (Mrs. Johnson): The narrator and mother of Dee and Maggie. She is a hardworking woman who values her heritage and the practical use of family heirlooms.
- Dee (Wangero Leewanika Kemanjo): The elder daughter, who is educated and has adopted a new name that reflects her African heritage. She represents a modern, consumer-driven view of culture.
- Maggie: The younger daughter, who is shy and scarred from a house fire. She embodies a more traditional view of heritage, valuing the family's history and stories.

2. Dee: Dee's character is complex. Her desire to reconnect with her African heritage leads her to adopt a new name and a new identity. Heritage and Identity

The theme of heritage is central to the narrative. The contrasting views of Dee and Maggie illustrate how heritage can be perceived differently. Materialism vs. Practicality

Dee's desire for the family quilts, which she views as art pieces, contrasts sharply with Mama and Maggie's perspective. For them, the quilts are functional items imbued with family history. This theme raises questions about the value of objects: are they mere commodities, or do they hold deeper significance tied to memories and traditions?

Gender Roles and Feminism

Mama's character embodies the strength of women in traditional roles, while Dee's character represents a more modern, assertive femininity. The tension between the two daughters reflects broader societal changes regarding women's identities and roles.
