Understanding French Verbs

In French, verbs are categorized into three main groups based on their infinitive endings: -er, -ir, and -re. Each group follows a specific set of conjugation rules, which can vary significantly. Understanding these categories is crucial for forming correct verb tenses and enhancing overall language fluency.

-ER verbs are the most abundant in the French language, making up approximately 80% of all verbs. Examples include "parler" (to speak) and "aimer" (to love). The conjugation pattern is relatively straightforward, often involving the removal of the -er ending and adding specific endings based on the subject pronoun.

-IR verbs, such as "finir" (to finish) and "choisir" (to choose), have their own unique conjugation rules. They typically involve removing the -ir ending and adding endings that correspond with the subject pronoun. Lastly, -RE verbs, like "vendre" (to sell) and "entendre" (to hear), have a different pattern that often includes dropping the -re ending and adding a variety of endings depending on the subject.
