The narrative revolves around two mothers, each representing contrasting parenting philosophies, as they interact over a puppy for sale. The story unfolds in a suburban setting, where societal expectations and personal desires collide, creating a rich ground for analysis. The character of Marie, who is more permissive and empathetic, is juxtaposed with the stricter, more authoritarian perspective of Callie. This conflict not only highlights their differing approaches to parenting but also invites readers to reflect on broader social themes such as privilege, empathy, and the ethical implications of our choices.

By examining the motivations and backgrounds of these characters, readers gain insight into how their life experiences shape their views on child-rearing and morality. As we proceed with the analysis, we will

Character Analysis

At the heart of "Puppy" lies the complex character dynamics between Marie and Callie. Understanding these characters is pivotal for a comprehensive analysis of the story's themes and messages.

Marie

Marie is portrayed as a compassionate and nurturing mother, whose approach to parenting is rooted in empathy and emotional connection. Throughout the narrative, she demonstrates a desire to provide her children with love and understanding, reflecting her own childhood experiences and the challenges she has faced. Her willingness to embrace her son's desire for a puppy exemplifies her understanding of the importance of companionship and love in the growth of a child.

Callie

In contrast, Callie embodies a more rigid and controlling parenting style. She is depicted as a mother who prioritizes discipline and order over emotional expression. Callie's perspective is shaped by her own insecurities and a desire to maintain control over her environment. Her interactions with her children reveal a fear of chaos and a need for conformity, often resulting in harsh judgments about others, including Marie. This dichotomy between the two mothers serves as a lens through which Saunders critiques the societal pressures that influence parenting styles and moral judgments.
