Origins of the Campbell Clan

The Campbell clan traces its roots back to the early medieval period in Scotland, emerging as a significant political and military force during the 13th century. The name "Campbell" is believed to derive from the Gaelic "Caimbeul," which means "crooked mouth." According to Scottish tradition, this name was given to the clan's founder, Sir Neachton Campbell, due to his physical appearance.

The clan's early history is closely linked to the region of Argyll, where they established themselves as one of the dominant clans.
