Hearts of Iron IV (HoI4), the grand strategy game developed by Paradox Interactive, offers players a vast array of choices and pathways as they navigate the tumultuous years leading up to and during World War II. One of the most intriguing nations to play in HoI4 is Communist China, a country with a rich history, complex political landscape, and unique gameplay mechanics. This guide will explore the strategies, events, and challenges that come with leading Communist China to victory.

Understanding Communist China

Communist China starts in a precarious position in 1936. The country is embroiled in civil conflict, with the Nationalists (Kuomintang) controlling most of the territory. However, the Communist Party of China (CPC), led by Mao Zedong, has the potential to seize power and unify the nation under communist ideology.

Key Features of Communist China

1. National Focus Tree: Communist China's focus tree is extensive, allowing players to pursue a variety of strategies ranging from internal consolidation to external expansion.
2. Faction Affiliations: Initially, Communist China is not part of any faction, which provides flexibility in diplomatic relations. Players can choose to ally with the Soviet Union or pursue independence.
3. Resource Limitations: The nation starts with limited industrial capacity and resources, making it crucial to manage production and trade effectively.

Starting Out: 1936 Strategy

Initial Objectives

At the start of the game, your primary objectives should be:

- Consolidate Power: Defeat the Nationalists and establish control over China.
- Build Your Army: Focus on creating a strong military to defend against external threats while preparing for the civil war.
- Develop Infrastructure: Improve infrastructure to support industrial growth and troop movement.

Focus Tree Path

The focus tree is a vital aspect of your strategy. Here's a recommended path for your initial focuses:

1. Land Reform: This focus will help you gain popular support and increase your manpower.
2. The United Front: Consider forming a united front against Japanese aggression. This can help in the fight against external threats while you consolidate power internally.
3. Strengthen the Party: Focus on internal policies that will enhance your political power and stability.

Civil War: Defeating the Nationalists

Preparing for War

Before engaging in civil war, ensure you have a well-rounded military. Prioritize the following:

- Infantry Divisions: Build a solid base of infantry divisions, as they are the backbone of your army.
- Special Forces: Consider creating mountain troops to navigate the challenging terrain of China.
- Artillery Support: Ensure you have sufficient artillery to provide support during key battles.

Engaging the Nationalists

Once you feel prepared, declare war on the Nationalists. Here are some tactics to consider:

- Use of Terrain: Leverage China's geography to your advantage. Mountains and rivers can be used defensively.
- Guerrilla Warfare: Employ guerrilla tactics to disrupt Nationalist supply lines and operations.
- Encircle and Destroy: Attempt to encircle Nationalist divisions to eliminate them decisively.

Post-Civil War: Building a Communist State

Establishing Control

Once you have defeated the Nationalists, focus on consolidating your power:

- Political Purges: Eliminate any opposition within your ranks to ensure stability.
- Economic Reforms: Transition the economic system to align with communist ideals. Focus on land redistribution and industrialization.

National Focuses Post-Civil War

Following the civil war, shift your focus to the following tree branches:

1. Industrial Expansion: Increase your industrial output to better support your military and economy.
2. Military Modernization: Invest in modernizing your forces to prepare for future conflicts.

Dealing with External Threats

Japanese Aggression

One of the most immediate threats Communist China faces is Japanese aggression. It's crucial to be prepared for war with Japan. Consider the following strategies:

- Form Alliances: Seek to ally with the Soviet Union or other communist nations to deter Japanese expansion.
- Develop a Defense Strategy: Fortify key cities and regions that are likely to be targeted by Japanese forces.
- Guerrilla Tactics: Similar to your approach in the civil war, employ guerrilla tactics to hinder Japanese supply lines and operations.

The United Front

If you haven't formed a united front previously, now is the time. Collaborating with Nationalist forces can be beneficial in repelling Japanese advances. However, be cautious of potential betrayals and maintain vigilance over your allies.

Expansion and International Relations

Post-War Expansion

Once you have secured your position in China, consider expanding your influence in Asia. Here are some potential targets:

- Southeast Asia: Nations like Vietnam and Thailand can be valuable additions to your communist sphere.
- Mongolia: An easy target to expand your territory and influence.

Diplomatic Strategies

Engage in diplomacy to strengthen your position:

- Join Comintern: Allying with the Soviet Union and other communist nations can provide military and economic support.
- Influence Neighboring Nations: Use diplomacy to foster communist movements in nearby countries, creating a buffer against imperialist powers.
