1. Misdirection: Blaine often directs attention away from the method of the trick, allowing him to execute sleight of hand unnoticed.
2. Suggestion: He plants ideas in the minds of his audience members, leading them to believe they have made choices when, in fact, he has predetermined the outcome.
3. Emotional Engagement: By creating an emotional connection, Blaine makes his audience more susceptible to suggestion and less likely to analyze the mechanics of the trick.

Examples of Psychological Tricks

David Blaine uses psychological techniques in various performances, such as:

- The Card Prediction: Blaine may ask a participant to think of a card, subtly guiding their choice through verbal cues and body language.
