Now that you have your materials and have studied your chosen Pokemon, it's time to start drawing. Below is a step-by-step guide that will help you through the process.

Step 1: Create a Rough Outline

Begin by sketching a simple outline of the Pokemon. Use light pencil strokes to ensure you can easily erase and modify your lines as needed.

- Start with basic shapes: Use circles, ovals, and rectangles to define the head, body, limbs, and tail.
- Keep proportions in mind: Make sure the sizes of the shapes are relative to each other, keeping the overall look of the Pokemon in mind.

Step 2: Add Details

Once you have the basic shapes down, it's time to refine your outline and add details.

- Define facial features: Draw the eyes, mouth, and any unique facial characteristics.
- Sketch the limbs: Add details to the arms, legs, and any other appendages.
- Incorporate unique features: This may include patterns, markings, or accessories that are characteristic of the Pokemon you are drawing.

Step 3: Refine Your Drawing

Now that the details are in place, it's time to refine your drawing further.

- Erase unnecessary lines: Remove any overlapping or extraneous lines that are no longer needed.
- Go over your outline: Use a darker pencil or fine-liner pen to trace over the final lines you want to keep.

Step 4: Add Color

Coloring your drawing can bring your Pokemon to life! Here are some tips for adding color effectively:

- Choose your colors wisely: Refer to your reference images to ensure you are using the correct colors for your Pokemon.
