Origins of International Harvester

Founded in 1902, International Harvester Company (IHC) emerged from the consolidation of several agricultural equipment manufacturers. The goal was to create a more efficient and effective force in the agricultural market. The company quickly gained a reputation for producing high-quality farm machinery, which laid the groundwork for the branding that would follow.

Early Logo Designs

The earliest logos of International Harvester were relatively simple, reflecting the utilitarian nature of their products. Key features of these designs included:

1. Text-Based Logos: The initial logos primarily featured the name "International Harvester" in bold typeface, emphasizing the company's identity.
2. Inclusion of Imagery: Some early logos used illustrations of farm equipment, such as tractors and plows, to visually communicate the company's purpose.
